Who Should Attend

This program is relevant to all lawyers who write expository or persuasive documents. The program focuses on the problem that most often plagues even the best legal writers: organizing sections, passages and longer paragraphs that deal with complex analyses.

About the Program

This program is based on a truth best stated by Daniel Webster: “The power of clear statement is the great power of the bar.” It gives participants a systematic, powerful approach for creating documents that are as clear, forceful, and persuasive as possible.

Designed for litigators, the program focuses on four critical aspects of advocacy writing, with an emphasis on writing persuasive factums:

- Writing effective introductions – at the beginning and throughout the brief
- Turning facts into persuasive stories
- Beyond classical logic: structuring arguments that persuade
- Crafting sentences and paragraphs to persuade

The program is based on many examples of good and bad factums, including expert revisions of draft factums. It helps lawyers to “think like a writer” with the same intellectual sophistication with which they already think like lawyers, and offers a systematic approach for editing factums to improve their clarity and persuasiveness.

Meet Your Presenter

Steve Armstrong has led writing programs for lawyers and judges in Canada and the United States for over 20 years. He serves as lead instructor for the award winning Annual Written Advocacy Course (Osgoode Hall Law School and the Advocates' Society) and has taught similar programs to wide acclaim for a number of American and Canadian law firms. He teaches regularly in programs for new U.S. and Canadian federal judges, and conducts programs for lawyers under the sponsorship of major continuing legal education organizations and government agencies such as the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Federal Trade Commission. With Professor Timothy P. Terrell, he is the author of Thinking Like a Writer: A Lawyer's Guide to Effective Writing and Editing (Practising Law Institute, 2008). Supreme Court of Canada Justice Thomas Cromwell has said, "After only one day with Stephen Armstrong, you will write better and have the tools for continuing self-improvement."
