WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This program provides essential content for lawyers of all experience levels in all practice areas. It will be especially useful to general practitioners.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Do you read “aging client” and move on? Stop! Aging is a continuum that affects our physical, social and legal connections, beginning as early as middle age. All lawyers can expect to encounter new dynamics in their relationship with clients as they age, including planning for and managing incapacity, protecting against abuse, exploitation and discrimination, and maintaining personal autonomy. Milestone events like retirement and later-life marriage and divorce require a more thoughtful lens, but so do quieter transactions like changing names on bank accounts, amending title and share documents, and drafting new powers of attorney. These are challenging conversations that can sometimes create conflicts but if trusted legal counsel doesn’t raise them, who will? This highly practical program with noted elder law lawyer Jan Goddard is designed to enhance your understanding of how specific legal issues related to aging arise in different practice areas, what steps lawyers can take to help safeguard clients’ autonomy and self-determination, and general best practices for maintaining high standards of professionalism and service when working with aging clients. Using a combination of fact scenarios and audience polls, Jan will explore a variety of common scenarios you may encounter with aging clients, including widowhood and remarriage, employment of an adult child, transfer of a family business, use of recreational property, jointly owned assets, “blended” family fights, return of estranged family members and potential scams. With each example, you’ll become more aware of where you may be missing opportunities to ask more probing questions and help clients make more informed decisions. All lawyers have a vital role to play in securing the legal rights, dignity and autonomy of their clients. Attend this program and acquire new tools to help you take a more intentional approach to serving your clients as they age.
